I can understand the Snow Party story not being a favorite. I guess you could say she said hello back of the bedroom to tell Hazel all about her new Suze was coming over. She wagged herself out around the room, she kept asking Dad when to jump up on the bed with us. Getting back down and wagging her hind-end out her frame to get the scent of your letter. Front paws up on the bedspread and stretched kites were on the lawn, and Mom was sitting calmly beside them.

The rancher took a bite of the biscuit he’d come out with and tossed it towards Mom. It landed right in front of her. “Go ahead, you earned it.”

She waited and watched as the rancher scolded Carli a bit and put her in the truck to head off to work somewhere in the distance. Then she ate her prize, and... developed a lifelong taste for butter.

The rancher’s wife came out and rehung some of the laundry and collected what needed to be rewashed up to the porch. She sat down on the front step and called my Mom over to her.

Mom sat at the wife’s feet and listened intently to something, and... Carli was learning her training and the exact same thing about the dog and things to watch out for. She waited and watched as the rancher scolded Carli a bit and put her in the truck to head off to work somewhere in the distance. Then she ate her prize, and... developed a lifelong taste for butter.

The next day, when the rancher lifted Mom out of his big truck, she was only on the ground for a few minutes when she saw that Carli the Heeler was certainly going to be a handful for Mom. She had barely gotten to check out her new environs when she heard fierce growling behind the house.

Racing across the yard, she caught Carli pulling the bedsheets off the clothesline. Mom lowered her head and straightway plowed her muzzle into Carli’s side at full speed, with such force that Carli yelped and ran towards the house.

Mom and Dad do a lot more outdoor stuff that restless for warmer weather too, in part because Mom and Dad do a lot more outdoor stuff that we take part in when it’s warmer. Hazel and I also miss lounging in the sun. We tried a couple of times recently, but a stiff, cold wind drove us back to the patio door where Dad was waiting.

How did he know?

Now, about finding a new pack member. I’m going to be cautious with telling you what kind of dog to look for. Dad says the right dog can come in nearly any shape or size. He also says the exact same thing about the wrong dog. Now on to the style of dog, like temperament and stuff.

When you meet, take them away from other dogs and give them time to calm down and display their own... uh... rhythm. Dad showed me pictures of the two breeds you have at home now, and I think a medium-sized dog, like me, might help even things out around the household.

My birth Mom was mostly Samoyed with a bit of Retriever. She was white with apricot highlights, a lion’s mane of white, a curled upright tail (again, like mine), and one upright ear and the other at half-mast. You could tell when my Mom was irritated, or listening intently to something, as both ears would stand upright. From puppyhood, she lived on a farm for two years with her brother Henry. Henry was the working dog of the farm.

Mom’s days consisted mainly of herding the chickens back to their area, patrol for fox or weasel signs, and waiting on the porch for Henry to return from the fields. She told me that one day a rancher from down the road asked to borrow her for a few weeks to help with a new heeler they were having trouble with at the ranch.

Carli, the heeler, was learning her training and showed a lot of promise, but she had trouble calming down after her work day. Carli was prone to get into mischief if she was bored. The rancher, having observed Mom’s peaceful but alert nature, was hoping she would be good company and maybe help with bring a little calm to the household.

I remember when she told me about the day she left the farm for the ranch. I was only a few weeks old, and had wiggled up against her chest for a nap, and pressed my face into her ruff while she told me of the anxiousness she felt leaving Henry and the only home she’d known.

The rancher lifted Mom out of his big truck, she was only on the ground for a few minutes when she saw that Carli the Heeler was certainly going to be a handful for Mom. She had barely gotten to check out her new environs when she heard fierce growling behind the house.

Speaking of Spring, Dad said a small flock of robins came through the yard this morning. Stopped by on their way to their northern homes. Dad says it’s a sure sign of Spring’s approach. Bet they’re on their way to your town by now.

Tucker Responds to Your Letters

Dear Cill:

I’m writing today because I had some questions after reading your last column.

My younger sister, Susannah (Suze), has me read your column to her whenever Mom picks up the new issue. Suze wants to get a dog like you someday. Between Mom’s Pomeranian (Zeus) and my older brother’s Mastiff mix (Tiny), we could use a pack sheriff around here. Zeus bossed Tiny around all day long, and with the weather in the north country, we’ve been cooped up in the house together more than usual. We could use a peacekeeper.

What breed of dog are you again? We couldn’t remember. We went off to start looking for a dog like you to adopt. If Mom and Brendon (Bren) can have their dogs, why can’t the sisters have one?

Also, Suze wasn’t a big fan of your story about your snow-day (we’re tired of snow), and she’d like a story about your relatives. Those are her favorites.

Yours,
Priscilla Montoya (Cill), 14
Northern Coconino County

P.S. Wish us luck on convincing Mom about a getting our own dog

P.P.S. Suze says hi to your deputy.

Dear Cill:

Thank you for your kind letter. Dad read it to me last night. I had already taken my position in bed, and Dad was waiting with me for Mom. Keira waited in the doorway, knowing Dad would say his goodnights and most likely head out to the kitchen to get a snack. Hence Keira’s reluctance to jump up on the bed with us.

She impatiently ignored Dad’s reading of the letter, because it was mostly about me, but got excited about Suze’s personal greeting. She put her front paws up on the bedspread and stretched out her frame to get the scent of your letter.

Getting back down and wagging her hind-end around the room, she kept asking Dad when Suze was coming over. She wagged herself out of the bedroom to tell Hazel all about her new friend. I guess you could say she said hello back to you in her own way.

I can understand the Snow Party story not being one of your favorites. The pack here is getting restless for warmer weather too, in part because Mom and Dad do a lot more outdoor stuff that we take part in when it’s warmer. Hazel and I also miss lounging in the sun. We tried a couple of times recently, but a stiff, cold wind drove us back to the patio door where Dad was waiting.

I hope you find what you are looking for, Cill. I’ll save the story on how I was born the next spring on that very ranch for you and Suze next time.

Speaking of Spring, Dad said a small flock of robins came through the yard this morning. Stopped by on their way to their northern homes. Dad says it’s a sure sign of Spring’s approach. Bet they’re on their way to your town by now.

Peanut’s Tale...

Peanut was brought in as a stray to a shelter in Phoenix about a year ago. He was there for about two weeks when he was given the opportunity to come to the Humane Society of Sedona with a transport along with several other dogs on April 4, 2022.

One by one, his previous shelter-mates found their forever families. There were a couple of times he thought he had his too, but alas, it was not so. As time went on, he has begun to struggle. Spending over a year in a shelter environment, no matter how kind and loving it is, is still not a home.

Peanut can be very fearful of new people, but when he warms up he is a sweet boy that loves to cuddle and sit in your lap. He is affectionate with the people that work with him.

He really needs his own person or family that he can cuddle up with all the time.

He loves going for walks and does very well on a leash. He is poty-trained and knows some commands. He has been clicker-trained and would just need a little refresher to start using those skills again. He loves scent games and sniffing at everything on his walks.

Peanut loves to play (especially tug-o-war). He absolutely loves rope toys. He has a blast playing in the snow— as you can see from his picture. He also loves going for car rides as well as going on hikes.

Peanut is a very smart dog and is eager to please. He is ready for his forever family and very much needs one. He needs a loving and patient person or family who can be consistent with him. He would do best as the only pet in the home because of the amount of love and attention he will need, especially in the beginning.

Peanut is a Basset Hound mix, about 2 years old, around 35 pounds, neutered, microchipped and has all his current vaccines. His adoption fee has been sponsored.

As with all of our adopted animals, Humane Society of Sedona would provide post-adoption support to his new family, register Peanut’s microchip for free, and provide a free health exam to a local vet, plus other after-adoption benefits. Peanut would also do well in a foster home until he finds his forever family. Humane Society of Sedona provides any needed supplies as well as 24-hour support to our fosters.

If you are interested in Peanut—either to foster or to adopt him—please call the Humane Society of Sedona (HSS) at 928-282-4679. If you are not able to foster or adopt Peanut, you can still help him by sharing his story with your friends and family.

Please feel free to post Peanut’s tale to your social media page. The more people that know about Peanut, the better chance he has of finding his forever family!

Foster homes provide a special place for animals with medical, behavioral or age-related needs. It can make a massive difference in the life of a shelter animal to be placed in a foster home. In addition, foster homes allow us to take in more animals from our community as well as to help other animal welfare organizations currently struggling with overpopulation.

If you are interested in finding out more about our foster program or to become a foster, please visit our website: HumaneSocietyOfSedona.org. You can also give us a call at (928) 282-4679.

Lucky Has Luck

Pets Return Home (PRH) is blessed with amazing volunteers and animal welfare connections. Lucky, a Labrador pit-bull mix is one of many family rescue stories. She and her three puppies came to us in January 2022. Winnie, an animal lover, crawled fifteen feet up an underground culvert pushing a laundry basket to rescue Lucky and her family. She put the three pups in the basket and backed out in the ice.

Winnie contacted Blackhat Humane who knew PRH had the facility and experience to care for the three week old, malnourished puppies and mother. Chuck, a PRH volunteer, drove the twelve-hour round trip to bring them to us. We placed them in one of our nursery wards, where they received high calorie food, vaccinations, and parasite treatment.

Lucky, Tootsie, Candy, and Koko were integrated with our free-range pack of fifty adult dogs who helped them learn dog manners, socialization, and most importantly, to build confidence. All the pups were adopted.

Lucky had no sound when barking. She had a hard time breathing when playing, so we took her to Verde Veterinary Hospital and Danza del Sol Veterinary Hospital for diagnosis. X-rays showed a BB lodged in her shoulder next to vertebral fragments.

The BB destroyed her voice box, and scar tissue from the BB penetrating her esophagus caused an airway blockage. Consults with two surgeons revealed that an operation would not yield much improvement.

A remarkable family, Janet and Mike, stepped up to adopt her despite the airway issue and lack of bark. Unfortunately, Lucky’s luck did not end there. When she left our facility, we thought she had a little bleeding related to her spay. It was actually a uterine tumor. She was examined by specialists in Flagstaff and Gilbert. The type of cancer she had was treatable/curable with chemotherapy.

We offered to take Lucky back to keep Janet and Mike from incurring the cost. Just like so many of our other adopters, they said, “No, we won’t give up on Lucky, we love her.” After a year of chemotherapy by Oak Creek Small Animal Clinic, Lucky has been certified CANCER FREE.

Janet, Mike, Lucky, and Pets Return Home are looking for help paying the $4,800 bill. Will you please help Lucky, and her parents offset some of the cost by donating, sharing, and recruiting others? Lucky has had bad luck and good luck, so let’s give her one more round of GOOD luck.

Five veterinary hospitals, two Rescues, four individuals, and $5,000 saved Lucky to be a lifelong loving companion.

Thank you for helping. To help and see more of Lucky’s story, including pictures and videos, go to www.petsreturnhome.org/Lucky.

Pets Return Home saves unadoptable, abandoned, neglected, and abused homeless dogs. Our dogs run free (40+) on our seven-acre campus to build confidence and trust, resulting in stable and loving companions. We are a NO-KILL shelter staffed by volunteers and provide shelter, behavior/medical rehabilitation, adoption, and sanctuary for our dogs.

I gave you my house,
when you were alone.

When I walk through the door
it now feels like a home.

Tail wagging and waiting,
our bond quickly grew.

I gave you my heart,
and you gave me yours.

Such unconditional love.

Proper Dental Care is Critical to Overall Pet Health

By Heidi Dahms Foster

Dental health greatly affects overall health in pets as much as it does in people. Dental cleanings are often expensive, especially if it involves pulling teeth or other surgery. Problems cannot always be prevented, but there are many precautions people can take to encourage proper dental health in their pets.

Dr. Michael Walker, a longtime Prescott Valley veterinarian at Bradshaw Mountain Animal Hospital, said certain breeds and sizes of dogs can have more dental problems, thus needing a bit more attention. These include small dogs such as chihuahuas and papillons, and Brachycephalic breeds (those with short noses), such as bulldogs and Pekingese.

To make matters worse, he said, many smaller dogs do not appreciate having their mouths touched. He suggests that owners work on a regular basis to handle their dogs’ mouths, rubbing the gums and looking at the teeth, so that vets can properly examine them during health visits. “Certainly, a lot of other problems such as fractured teeth and teeth growing improperly can be found during vet visits,” he said.

Like people, some dogs have dirty or problem teeth, and others may rarely need cleaning. While there is no guarantee that it will prevent all dental problems, Dr. Walker suggests that dog owners find toys and treats their pets will chew on, to help avoid tartar buildup. Brushing with a soft toothbrush and pet dental paste can help, but Walker admits that less than two percent of pet owners brush their pets’ teeth.

Regular vet checks are an important way to catch dental and other health issues. Some signs of dental problems include tartar buildup and brown calculus on teeth. A gum line that’s red and irritated can indicate gingivitis, a periodontal disease. “We want the gums to be pink, not bright red,” Walker said.

Just as dog food has improved over the years with healthy ingredients, there are many dental treats that not only improve dental health, but are easily digestible. Many toys are also available for dogs that will chew on them.

Some of Dr. Walker’s other recommendations include dental chews such as Greenies™, if the dog will chew them and not just swallow them whole. “Oravet™ chews are more likely to be chewed, and they have a human grade product that helps with plaque, tartar and bad breath,” he said.

He added that dogs love raw beef marrow or knuckle bones, but the drawback is that enthusiastic chewers can break teeth. He has also removed numerous marrow bones that have become stuck on the canine teeth and the dogs can’t get them off.

He also favors the toys in which treats can be inserted, such as Kong™ and other similar toys. Below are some of the available dog toys and dental treats to help maintain your pets’ dental health.

Dental Treats

Look for the treats made with natural ingredients, easily digestible, that have nubs or ridges to help clean teeth. They should also be the proper size for your dog. It may take some time and experimentation to find the treat that your dog will enjoy and that will clean his teeth properly.

Some popular dental treats include:

- Halo Herbal Dental Chews™ help to clean teeth and scrape away plaque and tartar. Made with peppermint oil for fresh breath Oravet™ Dental Chews come in sizes for dogs from 3.5 lbs. to over 50 lbs. Contains an ingredient that coats the teeth, tongue and gingiva to create a protective barrier against bacteria.

- Merrick Fresh Kisses™ are digestible chews with nubs, and come in several flavors such as coconut and botanical oils or with mint flavored breath strips.

- Greenies™ chews are easily digestible, freshen breath, and also come in sizes for all dogs.

Treats Containing Dental Toys

Treats containing dental toys include those that can be loaded with a variety of healthy treats for dental health and hours of chewing stimulation. Some, such as Kong™ toys, can be filled with anything that’s safe for a dog to eat. These may include kibble, canned dog food, treats, fresh fruits and vegetables, meats, cheese, yogurt, or canned pumpkin. A great summer treat is to fill and freeze the toys before giving them to your dog.

- Starmark Everlasting Bento Ball with Dental Treat™ Tough Dog Chew Toy is made for tough chewers, with nubs to clean teeth. Another benefit is the hours of mental stimulation from chewing.

- Kong™ toys have been popular for years, and there is a wide variety to fit any dog and help with dental health.

- Arm & Hammer Super Treadz Dental Dog Chew Toys™ are designed to help freshen breath, stimulate gums, and reduce tartar and plaque buildup. They are made from durable rubber to withstand aggressive chewers, and are infused with baking soda for dental care.

- Playology™ has a line of toys made to entice senior chewers, which can have the most dental problems. The toys are gentle for fragile senior teeth, Deep, brush-like grooves help clean dogs’ teeth as they play. They are infused with an attractive scent that won’t wash away.

- Bark Box™ is a subscription box that contains not only natural treats but innovative, size-appropriate toys for tough chewers and more. It’s a monthly box of fun that you and your dog will both look forward to.

Cats

While cats generally don’t like to chew, there are literally hundreds of varieties of dental treats available for even the most finicky cat.

Most of these products can be found at pet outlets online or at local pet stores. Whatever products you find that work the best for your pet, attention to their dental health will enhance their quality of life and often help to avoid more serious intervention.
Everyone please meet little, Izzy. She’s been seen a couple times in a residential neighborhood, then hanging out at High Desert Park in Black Canyon City. Neighbors tried to catch her. They provided her food and water, but she wouldn’t let anyone get close.

We set out to try to secure this little one before anything happened. As luck would have it, we pulled into the park, and we immediately had eyes on her...scared and on high alert...We tried to gain her trust using shy dog tactics. However, a noise from a passing vehicle spooked her. We scrambled and set the trap and came, one before anything happened. As luck would have it, we pulled into the park, and we immediately had eyes on her...scared and on high alert...

Rescue notes: She’s resting safely at my house starting last night. She’s warm, fed, and sleeping. She’s exhausted from continuous running. She literally fell asleep sitting up. She will rest easy tonight.

She looks like she’s had a litter or two of pups. She looks swollen, and she wasn’t comfortable. Allowed one pet on the head. Don’t want to push her. She’s been through so much yesterday. Was able to hold and check her this morning. No active milk production. She allowed me to hold her and pick her up. She’s still very nervous and shy, but so incredibly sweet. She does need a bath, but that will wait until there’s more trust established.

It has been a few weeks since her capture, and her milk ducts are drying up. She is on the schedule to be spayed in a few weeks. We are so thankful that she hasn’t been out in the cold weather that we have had.

Izzy has a possible adopter who came and visited her and fell in love. YHT is devoted to saving lives!

Volunteer of the Month

Volunteer of the Month for March goes to a very dear friend, fellow trapper, and Director Jen Eastman of Yavapai Humane Trappers Animal Search and Rescue.

Jen is amazing her care and concern for not only animals but for people as well is something to look up to she is like the mother hen making sure our team is ok.

Jen has help me carry traps at 2,3,4 in the morning through snow and mud and has always done it smiling knowing we are saving lives. Jen goes the extra mile each and every time when we have boot on the ground.

Jen got involved in trapping and rescue when a neighbor put out a Nextdoor call for help looking for a dog that had been hit by a car in town. For some reason, she just said to herself that she needed to help. She just happened to drive down the right street at the right time and there he was…the dog! The dog’s owner was so happy and the dog was so happy to see him that she felt elated!

On her way home, she got a call from a woman who said, “Hi, I’m Katrina and I run a rescue and we could really use help. Would you be willing to help us?” Of course, she said yes and she has never looked back.

Thanks, Jen, for all you do for our team and animals.
FACT: ANY dog can bite!
FACT: ANY dog can be dangerous!
FACT: DON’T judge a dog only by its breed!

We recently received an email from a woman who wrote, “Our puppy was killed by a pit at a local doggy daycare. Your organization should be ashamed for offering dangerous dogs to the public, and I will not ever again donate to your cause and will encourage others the same. Those dogs were bred to kill and need to be humanely euthanized to save other innocent dogs and human’s lives.”

While we were all saddened to hear what happened to her puppy, this email took me to a new level of frustration with what was suggested, and it is what prompted me to write this. (On a side note, the dog that killed her puppy was not from Yavapai Humane Society.)

When it comes to our canine companions, where do we draw the line between generalization versus certainty in terms of an animal’s behavior, personality, and temperament as it relates to their breed? This is a far-reaching question to which there is not one definitive yes or no, black or white solution, and it’s laden with the opportunity for overstatement on both sides of the equation.

The way a dog turns out depends on how it’s raised, treated, and his living conditions. So yes, there are some breeds of dogs who are more predisposed to aggressive behavior than others, but this doesn’t mean they’re all going to turn into violent dogs with a mean streak. It just means if they’re treated poorly, they’re more likely to become aggressive than other breeds of dogs.

If raised correctly, not abused, and cared for by a loving family, they say even the most notorious dog breeds can be friendly and peaceful. Let us dive even deeper into the world of dogs and ask ourselves—does every puppy in a litter sired by two grand champions make a grand champion? Does every top working dog sire a litter of magnificent working dogs?

Most, if not all of us, instinctively know that the world of selective breeding does not work this way. For this reason, while we may be fully aware of a given breed’s traits, we would be remiss to assume or assign 100% correlation with either the best—or worst—case scenario of a given breed’s profile when considering an individual representative of that breed.

Unfortunately, there are degenerative people who train Pit Bulls to fight each other for profit, and a big part of the training process involves starving, beating, and torturing them to prepare to fight to the death. It’s one of the cruellest crimes imaginable. Drug dealers abuse these dogs to train them to protect their drugs, guns, and money with their lives. For all these reasons, these dogs have a bad reputation they don’t always deserve.

Yes, there have been hundreds of stories of horrific attacks by Pit Bulls, but there are also thousands of stories of them being amazing, loving, family pets. They’ve also been known to save lives.

In August 2016, a woman in Georgia was being attacked by a man with a knife. A stray Pit Bull was nearby, and he lunged at the man, scaring him away, but the dog was stabbed five times first. This dog saved the life of someone he didn’t even know. The dog did fully recover, and the woman ended up adopting him.

But you do all realize that Pit Bulls aren’t the only breed considered to be aggressive or dangerous, right? The extensive list includes Alaskan Malamutes, Chow Chows, Dalmatians, Doberman Pinschers, German Shepherds, Great Danes, Rottweilers, Siberian Huskies, Bull Mastiffs, American Bulldog, Wolf Hybrids, Saint Bernards, Boxers, Labrador Retrievers, and even Cocker Spaniels. Does this mean that all of these breeds should also be “humanely euthanized?” Any breed of dog can be aggressive or dangerous! Do the research: Read the good and the bad, but don’t judge by the breed.

At YHS, we take each dog as an individual and do our best to evaluate them in an unbiased manner and describe their traits, personalities and propensities to adoptive families. As with any behavioral science, our assessments represent one set of observations in one context, at one given point in time.

Do you know how many Pit Bulls get overlooked every day in shelters across the world? TOO MANY! We can tell potential adopters about the most amazing dog, who loves to play, cuddle, go for walks, is good with kids and other dogs... and they’re so excited to meet this dog, until you mention it’s a Pit Bull. So, this perfect dog they were so excited about meeting, gets blown off without even giving it a chance!

On a lighter note, have you ever been around an angry chihuahua? Now, that’s something that should terrify you!

Rufus is a Buddy Now

As so many of the Shelter companion animals do, Rufus came into the Verde Valley Humane Society under sad circumstances on December 9, 2021. His owner had been evicted.

The animal control officer who brought Rufus in described him as skinny and said that he could be defensive aggressive. To add to that, Rufus is an American Pit Bull Terrier—not a breed that’s high on the list for many potential adopters.

Things were about to change for the better for Rufus.

Through the months, with the loving care, compassion, and dedication of VVHS volunteers and staff began to make a positive impact on Rufus’s overall wellbeing. Soon his shelter description included, “Rufus is an active guy looking for an active home. Rufus would love a fenced-in yard in which to run and romp and work off some of his playful energy.

He’s an affectionate guy who is selective about his doggie friends. Rufus weighs around 40 pounds. Rufus loves his baths!”

Still, Rufus needed that forever home that is the long-term vision for all of the Shelter’s dogs. Rufus waited and waited—a total of 218 days—then the magic happened. An empathetic VVHS volunteer decided that just socializing him a forever home. “Rufus is an active ter description included, “Rufus is an active guy looking for an active home. Chase’s Corner

Chase & Jan Tomlinson

I think I was born into royalty because everyone keeps calling me the Prince, and my mother’s official name is Shooting Star’s Posh Princess! Life at the Palace is good. I have a staff of two servants that meet my every need.

My day starts when I decide it is time for my breakfast. I have to wake up the one servant, usually at 5am. When it is cold and dark in the winter, I have a hard time waking that servant up to serve me my breakfast.

My dog food has gotten boring lately, so I get to have a topping on it to make it more interesting. I get my choice of vanilla yogurt, salmon treats, my favorite low fat treats, or salt-free chicken broth. Oh, by the way, I got a new topping for Christmas. It is beef and cheese crunchy treats!

I love to play the game of having my servant figure out which topping I want that day. When the second servant gets up, then I have my toast before getting my heart medicine wrapped in string cheese. This is because I have learned to pick it out of my food and leave it in my bowl! If it is cool outside, then it is time for my walk around the Palace grounds or sunning myself on the front porch to watch the activities of the day. Sometimes my servant and driver takes me to the jousting field, where I get to run and play. It’s like a playground where there is lots of equipment like jumps and tunnels and high walks and a teeter and hoops to go through. Whew!

If I don’t go to the jousting field, then we have a great dog park right here at the Palace. We also have a large play room where I can practice my scent work and other exercises. When I have to go outside, I just ask one servant to go and open the door for me. If one of them says, “Wait a minute,” then I just go ask the other servant to do it!

For a royal prince who lives in a palace, I have a very small space outside. I will have to talk to the palace carpenter about doing something about this situation.

Now it’s time to do my business work. I have to work on the computer to write my column for the Flagstaff-Sedona Dog Magazine. And my mom keeps coming up with ideas and projects for me to do.

A prince has a lot of business to take care of in the Kingdom. For example, my mom keeps bringing these little stuffed Chase Juniors into the palace, and I have to take care of them and train them all to be therapy dogs. There is also the business of practicing my scent work, obedience, and therapy dog work. I passed my therapy dog test and now, as the royals do, I have to go out and visit those who are sick or lonely.

After a busy morning, it’s now time for my nap. I might decide to take my nap in the front hallway, the dining area, or on the porch in the sun. After my nap, one of my servants takes me for a refreshing walk around the Kingdom. When we get back, it’s now time for my dinner. I get to choose a new topping!

After the servants serve me my dinner, then they can eat theirs. Then it’s TV time until bed. I like to watch the dogs doing agility or the doggie beauty contest. They don’t seem to be on the TV very often, so then I am forced to watch a lot of football games! It looks way too rough for a prince like ME.

The sun has now set, the palace is quiet, and all is peaceful. Time for my last outdoor trip, my bedtime snack, and off to bed. I usually go in my crate for two seconds and then prefer to sleep in my favorite places during the night.

I am a lucky Prince to have such a wonderful Kingdom, and I wish the same for all of my four-legged friends.

Wishing you a happy and peaceful life.

Pet owners who think of their fur babies as royalty (don’t we all?) can purchase the designation of Grand Marshall, King, Queen, or other Royal Court positions for their furry friend. Then they can strut their four-legged stuff on elaborate floats or fancy convertibles. During the festivities, the Krewe collects cat and dog food donations.

But Mardi Gras isn’t the only event in Lafayette that welcomes your canine companions. Since there’s always something to celebrate in the Happiest City in America, many of the dozens of music and cultural festivals (https://tinyurl.com/3y87mp83) are critter-friendly. Simply check the events website before you go.

Another favorite is the Dog Days of Summer fundraiser at Acadiana Canine Cutters baseball stadium in Youngsville, with “tail” gating, pup photos with the players, adoptable pets from local shelters, and interactive dog events.

Lafayette provides many happy places for your four-legged traveling companion, with parks for off-leash fun and socializing. Moncus Park is a 100-acre green-space in the heart of town with an off-leash dog park (https://tinyurl.com/47hdm33x), accessible treehouse, weekly pet-friendly farmers market, and Orlando Mountain, the highest point in Lafayette. World-renowned Pete Nelson of Animal Planet’s Treehouse Masters designed the treehouse knit within the limbs of a majestic Live Oak and sports a cargo-net hammock. Brown Memorial Dog Park also has a grassy off-leash area.

Smell out Louisiana forests at Acadiana Nature Center and Trails right in the city limits. You and your leashed pooch can scamper over six miles of mostly wooded trails that incorporate boardwalks along the way. There is even camping with hookups for tents and RVs.

We were delighted with our stay at dog-friendly DoubleTree by Hilton Lafayette, but over four dozen other Lafayette hotels will also welcome you and your pet. In addition, plenty of RV camping is available around the area. If that doesn’t make you happy enough, over 50 Lafayette restaurants offer hospitality to dog-accompanied patrons at their outdoor tables. Along with the rest, unleash your tastebuds at Old Tyme Grocery for their woof-worthy poorboy sammies.

For lagniappe or ‘a little something extra’ in Cajun French, don’t miss perusing paintings of the “Blue Dog” at Rodrigue Studio. Artist George Rodrigue, born in New Iberia, near Lafayette, moved his studio here after Katrina. His Blue Dog Series had launched him to worldwide fame in the early 1990s, and today dog and art lovers continue to lap up his pop work.

Puppy School

By Leland P. Gamson

You are now in puppy school
You will learn that you do not rule.

You are not going to learn
How to cook or to sew
But you are going to learn
What a dog needs to know.

You are not going to learn
How to read or how to write.
But you are going to learn
That you may not bite.

You are not going to learn
How to drive and to park.
But you are going to learn
When not to bark.

You are not going to learn
How to surf on the tide.
But you are going to learn
When I call, do not hide.

You are not going to learn
What does dog food cost?
But you are going to learn
How not to get lost.

You are not going to learn
How to field or to bat.
But we will teach you
How to ignore the cat.

You are not going to learn
How to shoot a machine gun
But you are going to learn
How to play and have fun.

You are not going to learn
How a ribbon is tied
But you will learn that
You must pee outside.

You are not going to learn
How to tell fern from moss.
But you are going to learn
That you are not the boss.
Lady Shepherdly: The Snow-Skiing German Shepherd

On August 4, 2022, this big old girl was pulled from a canal by Buckeye PD and Fire. They reported, “Dog tried to walk but could not stand on either hind leg; hind right leg shook before giving out, and hind left leg looked completely useless and mangled; according to buckeye PD, dog was found in a canal.”

“NO NAME” was taken directly to Maricopa County Animal Care and Control where she was evaluated and was to be added to the euthanasia list on August 7, 2022. She was estimated to be approximately 12 years old and looked exhausted in her intake pictures. We’ll never know where she came from or how she got in that canal, but from the moment I saw her picture, I knew I could help. You see, we have had old dogs for years and know that they can easily overwork their hind legs and have trouble standing once they get exhausted or panicked. With a little time, and sometimes meds, they usually recuperate.

We jumped into action and started Operation Save the Canal Dog. On August 6, we drove down to Phoenix to rescue Lady Shepherdly as she became known.

They loaded her into the back of my car with a sling and she sat quietly as we drove back up to Prescott, stopping for McNuggets & fries (as I do with all the rescue dogs). By the time we arrived at the sanctuary, she had decided that I was her person.

I have to admit, I was a bit hesitant to get my face too close to her. I usually don’t bat an eye, but she was big, and strong, and we hadn’t rescued a full-bred German Shepherd before. Once we were home, the pack introduction went incredibly smoothly and she moved into the house immediately. She had no intention of staying in the quarantine area for the night.

We loaded her up on pain meds and anti-inflammatories, and she slept about 24 hours. Like I suspected, with some rest and meds, she recovered and was easily walking and even running in the forest. She did great for the first month or so. Then we then started to notice issues with her hind legs.

Upon recommendation from our vet, we ordered up a test and she was diagnosed with Degenerative Myelopathy (DM), a disease that affects the spinal cord in dogs. It causes progressive muscle weakness and loss of coordination, similar to Lou Gehrig’s disease or amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS) in humans.

Her inability to control her hind legs has progressed fairly rapidly; she now cannot support her own weight. We’ve never had a dog in a wheelchair before and wasn’t sure it would be successful, particularly due to the terrain at the sanctuary. Her mind is 100% though, so we had to give it a shot.

We had a pair of wheels donated, strapped her in, and could not believe our eyes when she immediately tore off through the forest with the rest of the pack. She was a natural! She chases the other dogs through the forest amazingly fast, barking all the way. She is a sassy strong-willed lady which I believe will keep her going much longer. We have since upgraded her wheelchair to a more off-road version, which has been invaluable for her happiness and quality of life. She ABSOLUTELY LOVES IT!

When winter arrived, we modified an extra wheelchair with snow skis that we picked up at Noah’s Thrift Store. Lady now skis around the property in the snow.

Watching her, I am amazed at how adaptable dogs are. She can maneuver that wheelchair like it’s a part of her body that has been there for years. She actually backs up to get out of tight area and can wheel over logs and rocks with ease. She also wears heavy-duty booties to protect her feet. Her favorite past time is wheeling down to her Gram’s house for a treat every afternoon. She flies down that driveway ever anxious for the beloved piece of jerky.

I won’t kid you, she is a full-time job. She knows her body is compromised and needs assistance moving about the house, therefore wants to be with me every minute of every day. When I’m out of sight, she calls for me. Dad is okay, but she prefers Mom. We sit on the couch together, sleep together and she is my permanent sidekick.

I don’t see any sign of her slowing down in the near future; however, DM is a progressive disease so we make the most out of each day. We love her so. She is the perfect Lady!
